CAMBRIDGE, MA....Candice Beaulieu, Executive Director, Cambridge Office for Tourism is pleased to announce the deliciously exciting news that several Cambridge, Boston and Greater Boston restaurants have been honored for the first time ever by the acclaimed MICHELIN Guide. MICHELIN announced the much-anticipated awards at a reception Tuesday night, November 18, 2025 in Philadelphia at the introduction of the newest MICHELIN Northeast Cities Guide.

Beaulieu shared that several Cambridge chefs and restaurants were invited to the ceremony to be honored in person by MICHELIN. According to Beaulieu, "For many of our talented chefs and restaurateurs it is a life-long dream to be recognized by MICHELIN. For Cambridge this is a huge step forward to shining a bright light on our amazing restaurant community and its leaders. MICHELIN is sharing with its followers what we already know: our chefs, restaurateurs and hospitality professionals are shaping one of the most dynamic and diverse dining destinations in the Northeast United States."

As for the effect this guide will have on Cambridge's first-time winners, and the entire community, Beaulieu said that the city of Cambridge and all its businesses will benefit as a result of MICHELIN adding Cambridge to its culinary map. "Cambridge will be feeling the positive effects of this world-wide recognition for years to come, this is just the beginning! The MICHELIN Guide casts a wide net for creating exciting economic opportunities for our city."

CAMBRIDGE – A CITY TO SAVOR

From Kendall Square's innovation to Harvard Square's charm to Massachusetts Avenue's winding path of culinary delights, Cambridge is a city that celebrates creativity, innovation and sustainability in science, art, education and cuisine. According to Beaulieu, "The arrival of the MICHELIN Guide amplifies what makes our community so special: bold ideas, local flavors and a welcoming spirit that invites the world to pull up a chair. We extend our congratulations to the Cambridge restaurants recognized in the 2025 MICHELIN Guide to Northeast Cities. And we applaud our entire restaurant community for their tremendous passion and creativity." ABOUT THE MICHELIN GUIDE

MICHELIN is recognized as the world's esteemed travel guide recommending restaurants across the continents. A source of trust for visitors world-wide, MICHELIN's team of anonymous inspectors judiciously assign Stars, Bib Gourmand, Recommendations and Sustainable Gastronomy honors. Cambridge Office for Tourism and Meet Boston were instrumental in inviting MICHELIN to visit and share with the world our vibrant, one-of-a-kind culinary destination.

"This new guide reflects our work to spotlight the culinary excellence of Boston, Cambridge, and the surrounding region," said Martha J. Sheridan, President & CEO of Meet Boston. "Our efforts have ranged from building robust digital content around our restaurant, farm, seafood and beverage partners, to bringing local chefs on global trade missions in key international markets. We know that visitors will travel here specifically to experience our MICHELIN-recognized restaurants, and while here, they will discover that Boston's culinary culture extends far beyond these selections. From neighborhood gems to innovative newcomers, there is an extraordinary depth and diversity of dining experiences waiting to be discovered. And with this being our inaugural year in the guide, there is so much more to come."

MICHELIN's historic methodology is based on five universal criteria:

- (1) quality products
- (2) the harmony of flavors
- (3) the mastery of cooking techniques
- (4) the voice and personality of the chef as reflected in the cuisine
- (5) consistency between each visit and throughout the menu

The MICHELIN Guide was first published in France at the turn of the 20th century to encourage tire sales by giving practical advice to French motorists. Today MICHELIN's inspectors travel the world applying these original criteria of selection. As a result, the MICHELIN Guide remains a trusted, respected and reliable companion for any traveler seeking a delicious and memorable meal.
